BANDITS PUT INDIGNITIES UPON WOMEN OF MISSIONS

Letters Tell Of Men Searching Clothes For Valuables

BABY IS HERO

Tries To Defend His Mother From The Robber's Hand

Harsh treatment is being accorded the foreigners in the hands of the bandits in Honan and Anhwei, according to information reaching THE CHINA PRESS last night. At the same time that reports were received that the bandits had threatened to put their prisoners in the front ranks to be shot by any force which attacked them, or murdered in cold blood if troops were sent to rescue them, other reports received in Shanghai indicate that the foreign prisoners, and especially the missionaries kidnapped by the bandits, are being roughly handled by the brigands.

Mr. Victor E. Swenson writes THE CHINA PRESS as follows from Yuchow, Honan, under date of November 14:

In your paper of Nov. 7, under Reuter's Pacific Service, I find these lines: "The efforts to obtain the release of the missionaries, Messrs. Forsberg and Lundeen, who were seized by brigands at Juchow on October 9 have not yet succeeded. Both are, however, in daily communication with their families and state that they are well treated and availing themselves of the opportunity to preach the Gospel to their captors. As funds and valuables on the premises when the missionaries were kidnapped were left behind the brigands motive is presumed to be purely political."

The second sentence leaves a false impression as our coworkers have not been able to write to their families for over two weeks according to last letters received from Juchow. The next sentence will also give a wrong impression, which speaks of "funds and valuables being left behind." I quote from a letter written by one who went through the experience at Juchow which reads as follows:

TWO CAPTURED

"About three o'clock this morning we heard shooting, but did not know what it was. About 5 o'clock the gateman come and called Rev. Lundeen and said the robbers were in the compound. We got up and got fairly well dressed, when they pounded on the door, and Rev. Lundeen ran down and opened. They took him. Then about eight men came upstairs.

"First of all they took hold of us so none of us would get away. Mrs. Lundeen held the baby in her arms, Anna had Joel, and I had Reuben. My hair was hanging in a braid. They took hold of that so I shouldn't run away.

"One searched for money on my person and when I told him it was only my clothing, he insisted on finding out for himself. Oh! that was awful for me. I wondered how they were going to handle us then, but they discovered I told the truth.

"They took my coat and one of Anna's. They have taken a lot of things, of course, but some things that one would think they would take are left. When they had gone through everything, they told us to 'go ahead' and we went ahead of them each with a child in our arms. They made us march out always on the street to the east where they were waiting with the ponies. There they had Mr. Lundeen and Mr. Forsberg. Mr. Lundeen kissed the baby goodbye. Then we three ladies were told that we could go back."

A BABY HERO

Another one of our workers writes as follows: "Once one of them pointed his gun at me and threatened that if I didn't give him more silver he would shoot. When I told him I had none but what they already had he turned his gun and threatened to strike.

"Billy suddenly sat up and said in Chinese, 'I do not want you to hit my mamma.'"

Rev. Lundeen writes from Daying, Honan, as follows: "The

McTYEIRE SCHOOL DORMITORY NOW OFFICIALLY OPEN

Dedication Exercises Are Held; With Bishop Hay Officiating

The large and handsome new dormitory of the McTyeire Girls school at 1A Edinborough Road was officially opened yesterday afternoon with appropriate exercises. Thr Rt. Rev. Samuel Ross Hay, Bishop of North China, read the dedication service which was attended by a brilliant gathering composed of foreign and Chinese residents of Shanghai. More than 500 Chinese Girls, students of the McTyeire School acted as hostesses to the visiting relatives and friends and conducted the visitors over the new addition to the school.

The new dormitory is built in the shape of an open parallelogram facing wide grassy lawn extending some four hundred feet to Edinborough Road. The architecture is simple Norman in design, dignified and imposing in the extreme. The first floor is devoted to two large dining halls divided by a wide social hall attractively furnished in native woods and mahogany.

The three upper floors are used almost exclusively as sleeping quarters with two or three girls to a room, depending on the size. There is a fine library with several hundred volumes, an infirmary and physician's consulting room with all the datest medical appliances, as well as several recreation and committee rooms.

Those who spoke at the opening exercises held in the chapel included Miss Mabel K. Howell, of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church South, Nashville, Tenn., Dr. P. W. Kuo President of the National South-Eastern University, Dr. W. W. Pinson, of the Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., and Judge C. S. Lobingier of The United States Court for China.

Judge Lobingier's address on "The Invisible Structure" follows:

"It lacks but a week of being one year and a half since I stood in this place and witnessed the laying, by the beloved and venerable Dr. Parker, who has just addressed us, of the cornerstone of the noble structure which we dedicate today. During those eighteen months its walls have risen steadily until at last it stands completed and ready for occupancy by successive generations of students for whom it is destined to become a shrine of affectionate devotion.

"But independently of the physical building whose opening we celebrate this after-

CLYNES NOW LEADER OF PARLIAMENT OPPOSITION

Lloyd George Is Absent From Opening Due To Cold

SPEAKER CHOSEN

Elect Mr. J. H. Whitley In Turbulent And Cheery Session

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 20.—Incidents at the opening of the House of Commons indicate that Mr. Clynes is recognised as leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Bonar Law crossed the floor and shook hands with Mr. Clynes, after which the latter joined the Premier at the head of the procession to the House of Lords.

Mr. Clynes subsequently occupied the recognised seat of the leader of the Opposition with Mr. Asquith by his side.

Mr. Lloyd George was absent owing to a cold.

HOUSE IS CHEERFUL

London, Nov. 20.—The House of Commons was cheerful and turbulent during today's proceedings, which were confined to the election of the Speaker. It is noteworthy that Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Clynes and Mr. Asquith headed the customary procession to the House of Lords to receive the King's Commission.

The front opposition bench will apparently be divided between the Labor Party and the Liberals as heretofore. The National Liberal ex-Ministers are content with seats below the gangway.

The dignity of the proceedings in the House of Lords was interrupted at the conclusion of the King's Speech by a Member of the Commons Gallery, who shouted: "We will smash all this. We will give them tranquility." The attendant called to order and the termination of the proceedings prevented further incident.

WHITLEY IS SPEAKER

On the return from the House of Lords Mr. T. P. O'Connor moved and Col. Pretyman seconded the election of Mr. J. H. Whitley as Speaker. Col. Pretyman emphasised the Speaker's difficulties arising from the multiplicity of parties. He said that some Members were proposing to make things lively (Labor cheers) but predicted that the new Members shortly, equally with the old, would be jealous of their honor and dignity (Loud Labor dissent, Mr. Jack Jones shouting: "Dignity with knobs on! There is not going to be a London fog this time!").

Mr. Whitley returned thanks, took the Chair and received the congratulations of Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Asquith and Mr. Clynes. Mr. Clynes emphasised that Labor would co-operate in maintaining the authority and dignity of the Chair.

The sitting was adjourned.

The rush to secure seats in the House of Commons this morning was the biggest since the war. The National Liberals seized the corner seats on the Opposition benches for the ex-Ministers, the Independent Liberals occupied their former seats and the Irish Members and the Laborites also took their old seats. Lady Astor seized the corner seat on the Government side, formerly occupied by Sir Edward Carson, next to Colonel Gresham, the champion of the liquor trade, remarking: "Nemesis will overtake all, who like Mr. Winston Churchill, come up against drink and women."

MOTHER BURNED WITH CHILDREN IN HUCHOW FIRE

Midnight Blaze Destroys $50,000 In Property And 3 Lives

(China Press Service)

Huchow, November 18.—Last night, at 11:30 o'clock there broke out on Izangka one of the busiest streets of the city, a most disasterous fire that has occurred in Huchow for many years. Three lives were lost, a woman and her two children, and between forty and fifty thousand dollars worth of property went up in smoke.

The cause of the fire is said to have been the accidental overturning of a Chinese oil lamp in the rear of one of the buildings. Much inflammable material was scattered about so that before proper measures could be taken to extinguish the fire, it had gained such headway that the house was doomed.

From this house the flames quickly spread to neighboring buildings on both sides of the street. Native fire companies were aroused, but before they succeeded in stopping the conflagration ten shops were in ruins. Among them was the famous San-Yai--Zen, a building rented by the Methodist Mission and used for night schools and other forms of work of the institutional church which is projected and for which some $10,000 has already been expended.

Many of the families occupying the second stories and the rear of the shops had narrow escapes and in one of them, the woman and her two children were burned to death.

Charge Of Corruption Against Official Fails, Is Peking Opinion; Cabinet Will Remain

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 21. Major Barker received the sum of $80,000 and cheque, which it was alleged, Mr. Lo Wen-kan appropriated. The money represented the commission due to Messrs. Arnhold Brothers as inheritors of the Messrs. Arnhold-Karberg interests by the Italian shipbuilding company which took over the original contract.

Major Barker also negotiated the cheque for £80,000 which the Italian company paid to the Chinese Government. Most of this sum has since been paid into the Treasury and utilised for payment of official obligations.

This is declared in responsible [illegible] to dispose completely of the charge of corruption against Mr. Lo Wen-kan and the charge has apparently wholly broken down.

CABINET TO REMAIN

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

The members of the Cabinet this afternoon resolved to continue office until Mr. Lo Wen-kan's case has been settled, also to request the President to issue a mandate saying that according to a petition from Mr. Lo Wen-kan he was arrested on November 18 in consequence of a petition from Mr. Wu Ching-lien.

Mr. Lo Wen-kan subsequently discovered that he was charged with corruption in connection with the Austrian Loan of 1914. He afterwards voluntarily appeared at Court, is now awaiting trial, and requests that such be carried out so that justice may be done.

According to the petition from Mr. Wu Ching-lien the House of Representatives on November 20 impeached Mr. Lo Wen-kan in connection with this loan.

As Mr. Lo Wen-kan was still at Court his case will be set for trial in accordance with the law. A mandate to this effect has been drafted but may be altered or may not be issued.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 21.—According to unofficial Chinese reports the members of the Cabinet waited on the President yesterday asking him who would bear the responsibility for Mr. Lo Wen-kan's arrest.

Not receiving a satisfactory reply they intimated their intention to resign en bloc but President Li Yuan-hung persuaded them to give the matter further consideration.

Before the members of the Cabinet left the Presidency the Vice-Speaker and a group of members of the House of Representatives reached the President and requested him to dismiss Dr. Wang Chung-huai and Mr. Lo Wen-kan and appoint General Chang Shou-tseng, Minister of War, as Premier and Minister of Finance.

President Li Yuan-hung pointed out that members of Parliament exceeded their privileges in exerting pressure with regard to the dismissal and appointment of members of the Cabinet. If they continued with such efforts he would have no choice but to hand over the Presidential seals to Parliament and retire. The members of Parliament then departed, the members of the Cabinet having already left.

This afternoon the members of the Cabinet are holding a meeting

LAUSANNE CONFERENCE OPENS WITH A PRAYER FOR END OF THE STRIFE

Swiss President Hopes Graeco-Turk War Will Prove Last Act Of Terrible Tragedy That Has Been Desolating Europe And Asia So Long

ISMET PASHA TELLS TURKS' DESIRE

Curzon Pays Tribute To Switzerland; Crowds Watch Picturesque Turkish Mission Enter Casino Whose 600 Seats Are Filled

(Reuter's Service)

Lausanne, Nov. 20.—Expectant crowds lined the streets surrounding the Casino, the scene of the Conference, to watch the delegates arrive, the picturesque Turkish mission attracting particular attention. Every seat in the hall, which accommodates 600, was taken. Those in the front seats included M. Poincare, Earl Curzon, Sir Horace Rumbold, Signor Mussolini, M. Venizelos and M. Stambuliski.

In his speech of welcome, the Swiss President, Dr. Haab, expressed the hope that the Graeco-Turkish war would prove the last act of the terrible tragedy which for the past decade had desolated Europe and part of Asia.

TRIBUTE TO SWISS

Earl Curzon in his speech paid a tribute to Switzerland. He said that he did not know how long the negotiations would last, though it would probably be two or three weeks, but he could say on behalf of his and he believed all delegations that no effort would be spared to bring the negotiations to a satisfactory issue.

Ismet Pasha, speaking in French, emphasised the ardent desire of the Turkish people for a free and independent life. He declared that the Turkish delegation was inspired with the best possible intentions to conclude an honorable peace and he hoped that the other delegations were animated with similar feelings.

Earl Curzon, prior to the sitting, had a conversation with Ismet Pasha, who introduced his fellow delegates.

The speeches created a very favorable impression in all circles and are regarded as a good augury of success. The Turks were especially pleased.

M. Poincare will give a dinner tonight to the Allied delegations.

Malta, Nov. 20.—H. M. S. Malaya arrived at 6.45 this morning. The Sultan was incognito and therefore the customary salutes were omitted. The hour of arrival was purposely unannounced and there were very few spectators, but the news of the arrival quickly spread and the bastions, overlooking the harbor, were rapidly filled with people.

The Governor, Field-Marshal Lord Plumer, went on board the Malaya to welcome the Sultan at 11:30. The Sultan will stay at Fort Tigne where the officers' mess has been specially prepared for his reception. The Sultan is accompanied by his son, aged 10, and three Pashas and five Palace servants.

The Malaya will leave this afternoon for Constantinople.

REVOLVING LEADERSHIP

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Nov. 20.—The Procedure at the Lausanne Conference has been agreed upon by the Allied representatives as follows:—The Presidency will be held successively by the British, French and Italian representative: three committees will be formed: an allied press-bureau will be formed: and the sittings of the Conference will be private.

LOOKS FOR UNITY

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 20.—Complete Allied agreement on the eve of the past conference was so often announced only to be falsified by subsequent events that there is a disposition to look rather askance on the repetition of the assurance in respect of the Lausanne gathering.

Nevertheless, the absolute necessity of settling the Near East question on a firm basis affords justification for the belief that there are sounder grounds for accepting the familiar declaration on the present occasion.

LO'S ARREST IS FRAME-UP, SAYS GEN. WU PEI-FU

Considers Action But Part Of Intrigue To Dissolve Present Cabinet

(Special to The China Press)

Loyang, November 20.—General Wu Pei-fu, upon receipt of the news of the arrest of Minister of Finance Lo Wen-kan, regarded the action as conclusive evidence that the Tientsin clique (favoring the election of General Tsao Kun as the president) has succeeded in intriguing with Wu Ching-lien and other Parliamentarians to dissolve the cabinet on one hand and proceed with their scheme of the presidential election on the other.

While indignant over the situation, General Wu states that he is not opposed to the intention of General Tsao Kun to become president, but considers the time not yet opportune to carry out such a scheme. At present, Wu said, only Dr. Sun Yat-sen and Marshal Tuan Chi-jui have the qualifications of the chief executive.

Although General Wu considers Marshal Tuan's former acts are excusable, he strongly condemned Tuan's protege, Wu Kwan-hsing, who has been trusted with the work of negotiating with Fengtien and Chekiang. Wu Kwan-hsing, General Wu said, is still in Shanghai indulging in gambling and licentious living, spending money lavishly without realising the hardship that his own clique is suffering on account of his acts. Such adherents to Tuan, according to General Wu, is sufficient to cause the downfall of his master and can certainly have no support when he seeks political activities.

General Wu's support for Paotingfu is sincere, he said, as he expects great things from General Tsao Kun. He regrets that the Tientsin clique is so inconsistent in its plan to gain power. However, he intimated that he would have a way of saving the situation, even if the Tientsin clique plunges into difficulty in its attempt to elect Tsao president, so that the prestige of the Chihli party can yet be maintained.

YELLOW RIVER DIKE CONTRACT TO AMERICAN FIRM

Construction Will Cost $1,500,000; To Start Work Immediately

Word has just been received at the Shanghai offices of the Asia Development Company, Ltd., that the Governor of Shantung has signed a contract with the Company, through its President and General Manager, Mr. Paul P. Whitham, for the closing of the Yellow River break, Li Chin district, Shantung.

This work will be one of the most important engineering tasks ever undertaken in China, involving the construction of four miles of new dike, at a cost of $1,500,000 and will require the labor of 25,000 men. The work will be started immediately and must be completed before the next flood in June, 1923.

The dikes which will be replaced were washed away by the high water of August, 1921. The flood waters of the Yellow River at that time tore out over the surrounding country, devastating five districts and making homeless the inhabitants of 500 villages. Crops were ruined and countless lives lost.

The plan of attack for controlling the river has been worked out by the engineers of the Asia Development Company, co-operating with the Yellow River Conservancy Bureau. The first step will be the excavation of an entirely new channel and the building in of dikes on each side to confine the flood waters, after the diversion of the river into the new channel.

On completion of this work will come the gigantic task of closing the 1,200 foot gap in the dike through which the waters of the river have meanwhile been flowing. This closing will be accomplished by a method new to China but which has been used successfully in closing the breaks in dikes of the lower Colorado river. A rock fill dam will be constructed, rising higher and higher until a portion of the water flows through the new channel.

The velocity of the water will enlarge the newly constructed channel so that after the completion of the rock fill closure dam and the coming of the Summer floods, the new channel will carry this immense quantity of water. It is expected that the carrying out of the work will save the way toward solving many of China's flood problems.

"Smilin' Thru"

There's a little brown road windin' over the hill,
To a little white cot by the sea—
There's a little green gate,
At whose trellis I wait
While two eyes o' blue
Come smilin' thru,
At me!

Arthur Penn's charming poem "Smilin' Thru" is fairly well known and "Smilin' Thru," the great Allan Langdon Martin play likewise has achieved a degree of fame. It is to be presented at the Olympic Theater tonight by the Frawley-Blood company.

A tremendous success in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, a favorite in the hundreds of smaller cities and towns in which it has played, this so-called "fantastic comedy" is one of the most delightful plays that has been presented in the past decade.

"Smilin' Thru" deals with youth, love, misunderstanding and a sadly misplaced desire for revenge. Two young people are in love with one another, the boy about to join his regiment and go to the front, when through the girl's guardian, because the boy is the son of a man whom he has always hated, they part; then there in his garden, the old man again lives the days of his youth, sees the folly of the manner in which he met his life's problem, and from this glimpse of the past learns that happiness comes from giving happiness.

The youthful lovers are reunited, the older man finds the happiness he never knew before, and the play ends with a scene so extraordinary that it would be wrong to spoil its delight by telling of it in advance.

McTYEIRE SCHOOL DORMITORY NOW OFFICIALLY OPEN

structure whose beginnings were long ago and whose completion we can but dimly foresee. In the noon, there arises an invisible words of our most beloved poet

For the structure that we raise
Time is with materials filled;
Our todays and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.

"The materials with which the conductors of this institution are building are the young women of China—the future mothers and matrons of this vast and ancient nation. And surely no more important task awaits any nation than the training of its women.

"Emerson said:

The true test of the civilisation of any country is found not in the census nor in the crop report—no, but in the kind of man it turns out.

"Of course he meant man in the generic sense—including both men and women. For the real character of a nation is determined more by the status of its women than of its men. Show me a country where the position of woman is degraded and I will show you one where man is besotted and where civilisation exists, if at all only in name. Where does China desire to rank among nations? With Turkey and Abyssinia or with the progressive peoples of the West where woman is respected and looked up to? If China desires to be classed with the latter, let her educate and elevate her women. That they are not intellectually inferior but are capable of taking an advanced place in the nation's life, when given opportunity, is shown by such instances as the late Empress Dowager.

"I believe that it belongs to my country to have initiated the modern movement for the higher education of woman. And to understand how really modern it is we have only to recall that our Oberlin College was the first co-educational institution in the world and that it was not founded until 1833. Its influential successors are now found in almost every American state university and in many other institutions; but along with them has developed a fine group of college exclusively for women; such as Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, Vassar and Smith, which have educated so many of America's leading women and which already count among their graduates a goodly number of the young women of China.

"For this movement for the higher education of women is one of many which America has passed on to China. In such institutions as this, as Ginling College at Nanking, as St. Mary's school at Shanghai, as as Yen Ching at Peking and the many co-educational colleges which American philanthropy is maintaining in China, the ideas of our minds are bearing fruit. And in sending out for this purpose the flower of her own young womanhood, such as the splendid group which is conducting this institution here America is making its most precious gift to China. This truth will be more fully appreciated when it is recalled that this group comes from that section of my country where woman is held in highest esteem. For where in all the world is woman's place more supreme than in the American south?

"I have often wondered why such instances as these should be overlooked and some abnormal features seized upon by outsiders as the characteristics of America. I read the other day of a Japanese Count who instructed his daughter, then sailing for the United States, "to emulate the customs of the modern American flapper." It is a pity that he could not at least have called her attention to the American women teachers and the Young Women's Christian Association workers in his own country. When will our friends of other nations learn to seek the best and not the worst in America?

"May this building which we dedicate so auspiciously today prove to be

A home for the best
In both East and West.

"May the lives of those who dwell in it justify the sacrifices of its generous donors. And may it worthily symbolise that invisible structure, slowly but surely rising around it of a better and happier womanhood in China.

"Build thee more stately mansions oh my soul
While the swift seasons roll.
Let each new structure, loftier than the last
Lift thee to heaven with a dome more vast,

Last Night's Concert

BY PROF G. ZALSMAN

The works from four different composers, Mozart, Beethoven, Saint-Saens and Debussy were played by the Municipal orchestra at the Town Hall last night. Hitherto the programs had been composed of works from a single master.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 in D Major was played for the second time in Shanghai. The rendition was excellent and it is to be hoped that more of these famous symphonies will be heard in the near future.

Last night's concert opened with Eight German Dances, a work of Mozart's earlier days and reminiscent of Haydn's style. The music was orchestrated by Heimbach and is very charming and was well received.

The second part of the program was dedicated to French composers. Mr. Fon played a charming violin solo in Saint-Saen's Sarabande, which was followed by the same composer's famous Rigadon.

"L'Apres Midi d'un Faune" of Debussy was most interesting. The unusual harmonies and depth of expression made it particularly attractive. The concert concluded with Debussy's famous Children's Corner Suite.

Maestro Paci conducted with his usual consummate brilliance.

Bandits Put Indignities Upon Women Of Missions

Chinese 'animals' are trying to get all they can out of us. What the ho don't get, the fleas take, and what the fleas leave, the flies take. Their food is the best they have there, but none too good. It is taken from the people."

I have taken these few sentences at random from letters written by our fellow workers. They will suffice to prove to the public that all this talk about the missionaries being treated so well by the robbers is empty and meaningless. They were handled quite roughly and anything they found of the missionaries' possessions that they wanted, they simply took it with them.

Mr. Swenson adds the following comment on the general situation in Central China as follows:

"The situation here in Central China is rapidly becoming unbearable. The officials seem to be jealous of one another, and devoting their time to their own petty differences. The bands of brigands are allowed to run wild, looting and killing. If our officials had really been in earnest our co-workers would have been released before now.

"There appears to be no excuse for this lawlessness and pressure should be brought to bear on the proper authorities, so that a speedy release may be secured for our fellow missionaries. Winter is coming and unless they are soon released they will be forced to undergo extremely severe hardships."

HORDES RETREATING

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Nov. 18.—Chinese reports from Honan indicate that the large bandit hordes that had overrun Honan and seized the Peking-Hankow and Lunghai railways are now in retreat. The movements of the retiring outlaws are chiefly from Sihsien and Cheyang to Shangtsai whence they expect to get back to their stronghold in northern Anhuei where they are not accessible to government troops. At Choshan and Mingkang the bandits are giving way, as greater pressure is being brought upon them by the arrival on the scene of overwhelming numbers of troops ordered by Wu Pei-fu.

The retiring bandits are expected to assemble fresh forces at Nanyangfu, where at Shangtsai similar efforts will be made by them. General Chin Yun-ao has marched his choicest troops from Chengchow to occupy the regained posts at Chumatien, Yuncheng, Siping and Suiping. They are awaiting the arrival of more reinforcements from Wu Pei-fu before they start expeditions to round up the bandits and eliminate the scourge of outlaws in Honan once for all.

WOULD CHECK THEM

Some of the disbanded bandits are now reported to be retreating into the Honan-Hupeh border region where ex-soldiers now outlaws and robbers, of General Chen Shu-tan, former Tuchun of Shensi province, are only too anxious to join hands with their more enterprising brethren from Honan. The Garrison Commissioner of Hupeh of that district is now making plans to check the entry into Hupeh of the bandits.

The principal group of bandits responsible for the province-wide scourging this time are the former troops of Chao Chieh and Pao Teh-chen. Those under the former, it is said, were as a matter of fact the subdued bandits that raged in Honan and Shantung some eight years ago, and this time they are simply returning to their old profession of large scale robbing.

EXECUTED GENERAL

In addition to this, when General Feng Yu-hsiang came to Honan to be the Tuchun at Kaifeng, he committed a blunder in executing General Pao Teh-chen, who was held as an accomplice of the former Tuchun, General Chao Ti, who had revolted. Upon the killing of their master, Pao Teh-chen's troops all escaped with their arms, and went directly over to the bandits, meanwhile, General Feng Yu-shang, who was so keen in introducing reforms in Honan, disbanded many of the troops of the deposed Tuchun, and all of these men only helped augment the numbers of brigands at different dates.

The schemes through which the brigands are trying to outwit government forces are to hide themselves from the latter, and disperse into small groups in the country and villages creating violent disturbances and reaping the harvest of robbing, making it difficult if not impossible for troops to locate them, not to say defeat them.

TELLS BRITISH CLUB WOMEN OF RUSSIAN NOVELS

Miss Alice Ware Speaks Before B.W.A. Literary Section

Vivid pictures of Russian life were given by Miss Alice Ware in a lecture on "The Modern Russian Novel" before the Literary Section of the B.W.A. yesterday afternoon when she discussed the works of Gogol, Turgeney, Dostoyevsky and Tolstoi.

In her talk Miss Ware brought out the relationship of the Russian novel with the politics of the country and described the conditons which brought about the revolutions throughout the land.

Regarding the writings of the four leading Russian writers and the various phases of life which they attempted to depict Miss Ware said:

"The Russian novel as we know it has been developed quickly and has been formed mainly through the exertions of four men—Gogol the humourist and reformer, whose descriptions of his country drew the attention of the literary world to the possibilities of material in Russia. He made it his life work to show wherein lay the weakness of this people. He condemned serfdom and the oppressive official classes, and showed up the bad manners of the so-called aristocracy.

"Turgenev, the artist and critic pointed out the weak points of his people, and thought that Western culture would correct them. He wrote mainly for his own class, and warned them against being self-satisfied and boastful.

"Dostoyevsky, the realist, told of poor people with more sympathy than anyone else. He thought that Russia had her own salvation within her, and that she would not be benefitted by the introduction of Western culture.

"Tolstoy writes for humanity. He is a practical Christian and urges that the precepts generally accepted by Christians should actually be put into force as forms of government. His stories of oppression by officials, of wrongful imprisonment, of suffering inflicted upon the poor by the rich, . . . all these things he tells, not to get the government into disfavor, but to spur one on to individual effort. He believes that the salvation of every man comes in hard work.

"No amount of legislation will make a man moral. One must be pure from conviction. One must be humble, long-suffering, kind and unselfish if one is to help one's fellow man and achieve the greatest good. If a man sins he injures himself more than another. In the end justice prevails, although man's interference will often put off the day of reckoning. 'God sees the truth, but waits.'

"In this teaching Tolstoy reveals the most beautiful characteristic of the Russian people, their capacity for sacrifice. He appealed to their imaginations by teaching that we are all Mossiah's Christs, permitted to bear the sins and burdens of the world."

JAPAN'S TRADE OUTLOOK BRIGHT SAYS LOCAL MAN

Mr. C. L. Seitz Reports Indications Of Marked Business Revival

A brightened business outlook with conditions indicating a marked general improvement is noticeable in Japan, bringing satisfaction to both foreign and Japanese merchants in all lines, according to Mr. C. L. Seitz, who has just returned to Shanghai from a business trip to the Island Empire.

A live movement of goods is expected with the turn of the year, Mr. Seitz stated, and were it not for the near approach of the financial settlements, which must be made on December 31 in accordance with Japanese custom, the renewed trade movement would now be well under way.

The balance of trade which ruled against Japan last year and in the first half of the current year, has changed since mid-summer and is now in favor of Japan. As a consequence, business interests consider the trading depression, with losses in liquidation of stocks of the past two years, has been passed. The firms which have come through the crisis successfully are considered worthy of renewed credit and banks are offering good support to merchants of standing to enable them to rebuild their trade along sound and conservative lines.

While Japanese labor prices still rule high as compared with China labor, the difference is being largely compensated in the increased use of labor-saving machinery. Japanese organised labor, advised by sensible, far-seeing men in the Government, Mr. Seitz said, also has made concessions and reductions which have helped factories to resume operations with prospects of reasonable profit to owners.

The outlook for 1923, therefore, is considered bright and increased purchasing power in Japan is expected, with consequent heavier import movement. The restrictions of the government and banks on imports, which were necessary for a time in order to protect Japan's national trade balance, will be largely removed now that Japan's exports exceed her imports. It follows that the discount at present applying on Yen will in consequence gradually disappear.

While manufacturers, merchants, traders and commission houses seem to be doing well again in Japan, Mr. Seitz reports, owners of vessels still continue to have a hard time to make their tonnage cover expenses of operation. This condition of affairs, it is expected, will, however, soon right itself when a large trade movement, both import and export, creates a heavier demand for tonnage. Owners, it is anticipated, will not be slow in raising charter and freight rates when a brisk trade movement develops.

OPEN VERDICT RETURNED IN KINGSLEY CASE

Baby's Death From "Unknown Causes" Is Finding Of Coroner's Jury

The coroner's jury in the inquest over Maurice Kingsley, the five-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Kingsley, 223 Ben Building, returned a verdict in their final meeting yesterday afternoon that the baby came to its death through unknown causes.

The verdict was given by the jury, which was composed of Mr. F. A. Bowen, foreman; and Mr. George McGrane, Mr. Warner J. McRae, Mr. H. C. Pond, Mr. A. J. Ruhel and Mr. J. T. Wright, after they had met three times in an effort to discover how the baby met its death.

Yesterday afternoon they met in the Kingsley apartment in the Ben Building, where the crib in which the baby died was examined in an effort to decide whether or not it could have smothered to death, as believed by the father. They also familiarised themselves with the apartment.

Following the visit to the apartment they returned to the U. S. Court and after being out 15 minutes returned the 'unknown cause' verdict to U. S. Coroner N. E. Lurton.

The verdict ends a case that has attracted the public attention since the death of the baby on Friday after having been in perfect health on Thursday night.

Maxim's Cafe Opens Tonight

Maxim's will open tonight.

After many unavoidable postponements due to labor difficulties the opening of this new restaurant, ballroom and cafe, a notable addition to Shanghai's metropolitan night life, is definitely scheduled for this evening at 7. p.m., according to Mr. W. A. Stewart, manager, of Maxim's Salon and Palais de Danse.

The ground floor is devoted to a spacious public bar lobby and hotel office since Maxim's plans to cater to the travelling public as well as residents. The spacious ballroom is located on the second floor. There are approximately 100 small tables, each seating four, which encircle the dancing floor. The jazz band under the competent leadership of Jack Morris will occupy a raised dais at one end, and a sounding board in the shape of a huge conch shell will assist audition. The decorations of the ballroom are carried out in Mandarin blue, gray and gold, with rose silk lanterns.

To the rear of the ball room is a small and cozy restaurant tastefully decorated in the same color scheme. The third and fourth floors comprise the hotel suites, several having private baths attached. On the floor of each room is a heavy blue Tientsin rug of exceptionally heavy pile.

Maxim's is located at the corner of Avenue Edward VII and Kiangse Road. The management requests that reservations for this evening be telephoned as early as possible to Central 7592-3 in order that arrangements may be made accordingly.

The Dog Watch

By Westa

THE American baseball team that is now touring Japan will be in Shanghai on the thirteenth of next month and according to present arrangements will be here two days.

The weather in Shanghai in the middle of December is, of course, an uncertain factor. Those dates may find us in the midst of a blizzard, with enough snow on the ground to set the most hardened ricsha coolie to wondering whether to keep his coat on his back, or wrap it around his feet. And on the other hand it may be warmer than a Mobile roustabout's palm after seven pyramided passes.

In any event plans are afoot to have the stage all set for a baseball game, to be played if the weather permits—which will be good news to those of us who, not forgetting the big league quality of the baseball provided by the Shanghai team (that ought to set well with the local ball tossers) still would like to see the homeside professionals in action.

Some of the players who wore Shanghai uniforms last summer have expressed a willingness to get out for a mid-winter game, and these, helped out by the odd members of the visiting players, ought to make a pretty good nine. Freddy Bills, they say, is out back of his garage every afternoon playing catch with a coolie, by way of keeping his arm limbered up, and Harry Kingman, while he isn't doing much playing, spends a good part of every day and all of his evenings reading the Baseball Magazine and the St. Louis Sporting News, thus keeping in practically perfect condition.

One of the problems in connection with this game that is worrying the local management is what to do about Jawn Scott, for now with the short days upon us it is realised that Scotty would have to start right after breakfast to get in a full game before darkness, what with those long interludes of his between pitches, and while it is felt that the visiting players would be reasonable in the matter there is some hesitancy about asking them to spend all their time in Shanghai at the ball park.

At third base we will have the old reliable Walter Holiday, and while Walter may be a little creaky in his fielding, due to the long lay-off since the close of the season, he ought to make up for it in batting, since he is getting oodles of practice swinging a golf club. The other day at Kiangwan Walter went around in 146, which is just twice his usual score, but the third sacker explained that he expected to be called upon to play against the big leaguers, and was practicing his batting swing. Doc Downs was in the group to whom Walter made this explanation, and nearly spoiled the infielder's alibi by asking him why he was digging up so much turf with his swings. "These fellows don't play baseball with shovels, do they?" Doc asked.

Doc is a skeptical cuss when it comes to golf.

THIS team that is coming to Shanghai next month is described as a "baseball mission," the object of which is to encourage a wider appreciation of baseball throughout the Orient. Well, that's important if true. Let's hope that if these chaps play here they will give us their best, and that they will confine themselves to baseball, without a lot of alleged comedy thrown in, after the manner of most professional

Chinese Ball Team Wins Championship Title In Japanese League

As 10,000 fans cheered in wild enthusiasm, the Chinese baseball team defeated Sanshi by a score of 4 to 2 at the Yokohama Athletic Park and won first place and the pennant in the Shojikiya League, the same organisation from which the Yokohama C. & A. C. ball team had been eliminated.

The Chinese were the favorites of the huge crowd, and the victory was a popular one. The same Sanshi team, which ousted the Y. C. & A. C. athletes, fought hard and gave their husky opponents a hard run.

Hasada, the pitcher who started against the Y. C. & A. C. was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning when a base on balls and 3 singles netted 2 runs for the Chinese. Iwai, who gave the Y. C. & A. C. batters considerable trouble, appeared in the box and held the Chinese until the eighth. The Sanshi counted a run in the sixth inning as a result of a dropped fly and a single. The game proceeded in this tight fashion until the eighth frame when the Chinese added two runs by two perfectly timed and beautifully executed squeeze plays in succession.

With the score 4 and 1 in favor of the Chinese, Pow succeeded Lee on the mound in the eighth and after getting out of a bad hole by reason of a double play proceeded to make things exciting in the ninth by walking the first two men up and hitting the third. With the bases full and nobody down, a batter popped a weak fly, another was caught between third and home when a squeeze play fizzled, but one runner scored from third when the Chinese infield threw the ball away. The side was out when the last batter lined to short.

After the game both teams gathered in the center of the diamond, and Chance Leong, Chinese captain, received a huge bouquet of flowers on behalf of the team and was given the brilliant pennant.

The Chinese victory was popular as it is the fourth time that the team has been runner-up in a Yokohama league contest only to be knocked out in the finals. The Chinese section of Yokohama celebrated the victory, too.

NANKING AND HANGCHOW TIE 2-2 AT FOOTBALL

Two Thousand See College Teams Play; Game Saturday

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, Nov. 20.—The football game played between the University of Nanking and Hangchow Christian College this afternoon at 3 p.m. on the playground of the University of Nanking Middle School, Nanking, drew a tie, the score being 2 to 2.

The Nanking team proved however better than the visitors, especially in the first half in which the score was 2 to 1 in favor of Nanking. The two goals were scored by Mayo Chen, left-inside, and Hwang Chen Liang, center forward, of Nanking team.

The game was a friendly one and closely watched from start to finish by more than two thousand spectators.

The Shanghai College football team will journey to Nanking Friday and will play with Nanking this coming Saturday.

First 'Unt Set For Saturday; Club Holds Meeting, Elects F.W. Potter Season's Master

The annual meeting of the Shanghai Paper Hunt Club was held last evening at the Shanghai Race club. The meeting was very brief, as there was no business to transact beyond asking the members to approve the accounts, which was done, and to elect new stewards. The following were elected: D. B. F. Beith, A. W. Burkill, G. Grayrigge, F. W. Potter, H. G. F. Robinson, E. S. Benbow Rowe and N. L. Sparke. All are holdovers except Mr. Beith.

Mr. Potter was chosen master for the season, and the first hunt announced for next Saturday, at 3:30 p.m.

Secretary Olsen said that unusual interest is apparent among the club members this year, and that a very successful season is in anticipation. Scouts have been abroad in the land for many weeks, looking for new cuts and jumps, and the word has gone forth that they have found some holy terrors. On the other hand it is rumored that a number of new 'unters have been purchased and trained since last season, so that a faster pace may be expected than ever before.

Next Saturday, then, the red coats will be abroad in the land, galloping full tilt over the country side, and woe to the brittle bones who quake at the sight of a fence or a ditch, also woe to the owners of cabbage patches.

TWO ZONES FOR TENNIS COMPETITION

Davis Cup Committee Plans To Divide World's Players

WINNERS TO PLAY

Best Of Atlantic And Pacific Countries Meet For Title

(China Press Service)

New York, November 20.—The Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association will probably divide the world into two separate zones for the next Davis Cup competition.

The matter has been under discussion for several weeks and announcement is expected in a few days of the division that will mean Atlantic and Pacific preliminary championships, the winners to meet for the title.

It is planned to play off the Pacific championship in Honolulu between teams representing Australia, for two years runner-up to the United States; Japan, always a factor; the Philippines, which has crack tennis men and has been prevented from entering preliminaries because of the long distance the team must travel, and possibly India and China.

The winners of the Pacific championship would then play Canada and the ultimate victors would oppose the team which comes through with the Atlantic Championship.

HOYT ALLOWS ONE BINGLE IN 12-0 WIN

World's Series Star Gives Great Exhibition Against Keio

FANS TWELVE

Ball Leaves Infield Twice; Griffith And Falk Hit Home Runs

Striking out an even dozen men and allowing only 28 batters to face him during the game, Waite Hoyt, youthful hero of many diamond encounters, added new laurels to his fame a week ago Sunday when he gave the greatest exhibition of pitching yet seen in a Tokio ball park, as the All-American major league players defeated Keio University 12 to 0.

Takasu's walk in the fifth inning and Takagi's disputable infield hit in the eighth alone prevented an absolutely perfect game. The big league sluggers found Nitta for a total of 20 hits which netted 13 bases.

Hoyt's arm was supreme. His hurling was the outstanding feature of the major leaguers' play so far. The bleachers gasped in amazement as his twisters broke in perfect fashion, the ball doing things Japanese fans had not dreamed of as it cut the plate, and as his speed did not slacken with the progress of the game. The Keio batting order, noted for its punch, was powerless before Hoyt's shoots, and the rapidity with which the line-up was retired will furnish Tokio fans a subject for conversation for many a day.

TAKAGI SCRATCHES HIT

Threemen to the inning was the order save in the sixth and eighth periods. Twelve men went to the bench without getting a connection, and never during the game did the Yankee mound artist allow a batter to smack the ball squarely. Nitta and Yamasoka hit underneath in the fifth inning, sanding pop-ups to Falk in rightfield, but aside from that the sphere never left the infield. It was a complete Yankee battery, for Hofman received Hoyt's offerings behind the bat, and nobly did he work in supporting the mound artist. Takasu's walk spoiled the chances for a perfect game, but the pace of the World Series twirler did not slacken, and a shut-out was imminent.

Then, Takagi, Keio's second string third sacker, who had relieved Harada at the end of the fifth inning, cut under at one of Hoyt's twisters, lifting the ball over the pitcher and depositing it just in front of second base. It was a scratch, a lucky blow from the bottom of the bat, a disputable hit. Hunter started late and diving into the dust trapped the ball as it left the ground on the bounce but failed to hold it. Takagi did not deserve a clean hit, but Hunter's effort did not deserve an error. Takagi was given a hit by the barest of margins, but that hit was not such as to detract from the merit of Hoyt's great pitching.

FALK LEADS SLUGGERS

Takagi stole second and was caught off the bag in a snappy double play when Hoyt scooped Hamano's grounder and threw to Lavan in time to catch the runner and then the batter at first. Takasu was the only other Keio player to get to first base. The infield was airtight, and Hofman came in for a round of applause in the final inning when three Keio batters popped up fouls for him.

While Hoyt's pitching held the greatest interest, the big league wrecking crew was busy again, turning the game into a track meet as Nitta's spitter was clouted about for 20 hits, which produced 33 bases and permitted the scoring of a dozen men.

Falk took away the premier honors with a home run, a triple, a double and a single, walking once. Kelly also earned a batting percentage of 1,000 with four singles and his free pass, and Griffith contributed the second homer of the day when he lifted the ball over the rightfield fence.

Scoring started in the initial period, after Hunter was out at first and Strunk, who had hit for two bases, was caught off second. Falk tripled into the centerfield sign board and was scored by Kelly's hot grounder down the third base line. Kelly went home when Stephenson doubled into rightfield. Griffith reached first on Hanada's error, but Lavan popped out to Doi. Hofman and Hoyt struck out in order as the second inning opened, but Hunter singled through short, stole second and went to third when Strunk followed with another healthy grounder. It was then that Falk leaned on Nitta's spitball and lifted it high over the centerfield fence. Kelly singled, and Stephenson ended the inning with a fly to center.

Keio's started the fourth inning with his circuit swat, Lavan was out, Hofman singled to leftfield, stole second and was caught between second and third, after Hoyt was safe on a fielder's choice. Hunter singled, and Hoyt tried to steal home but was caught, Okawa to Hamano. Strunk got on due to Kirkhara's error in fourth frame, and Falk and Kelly followed with singles.

Chances to score ended, however, after Strunk was caught at home on the throw-in from rightfield and Kelly was out at second in a double play on Stephenson's grounder to Nitta. Hofman was near a score in the fifth inning when he was caught off third on Haruda fielded Hunter's grounder.

Nitta got into hot water in the 6th inning, and the Americans were allowed four runs despite the fact that only two singles were chalked up. Strunk was safe at first after he had struck out and Hamano had dropped the ball. He stole second, and Nitta filled the bases by walking Falk and Kelly. Stephenson scored the first two with a double to centerfield, and Kelly stole home. After Griffith and Lavan were out, Hofman's single scored Stephenson. Hunter was scored by Falk's two-sacker in the seventh frame after singling, advancing on Strunk's sacrifice and stealing third. Falk was advanced on Kelly's single but was caught between third and home in attempting to score. In the final period Griffith singled but was caught trying to steal second. Lavan doubled, stole third and scored when Hunter sacrificed.

CHINA AND ATHLETICS

Sports Editor: THE CHINA PRESS.

It gave me great pleasure to read Westa's article on your sports page today. It hit the nail right on the head, and I hope it will arouse some serious thinking among our people.

The lack of adequate training for China's athletes has been sorely felt. The result of last year's Olympic Games showed the consequence of bad training and incomplete preparation. It taught China a lesson, which, sad to relate, was not sufficiently heeded.

Right here in Shanghai, China's most up-to date town, we feel the need of a decent piece of ground where Chinese athletes can practise. Last year, before the Olympic games started here, a very promising young man, at present the record-holder of China's high-hurdles, tried hard to find a place where he could keep up his old form and improve by training, but he failed to find any decent place for his purpose. The result was: he had no chance to represent his country in the high-hurdles.

What is true of this is also true of other kinds of sport. China can never have a high place in the Far Eastern athletics, not to say in world sports, if such conditions continue.

Will the "patriotic men of wealth" be interested in this subject and do something toward this end? If so, China's young men will be lucky, and China will be lucky.

Yours truly,
K. S. C.

baseball teams when they go barnstorming. Some years ago a promoter took a team of professionals to Japan and they did almost everything while there except play baseball, and perpetrated a lot of rough jokes that got them in bad with Japanese and foreigners alike, including, among the latter, their own manager, who remarked when he finally got the team back to San Francisco that "you can take a baseball player out of the bush, but you can't take the bush out of a baseball player."

"The First Year"

It may have been the sudden change in the weather, or the long rehearsal yesterday morning or just the smiles of a benign joss that instilled verve into the Frawley company, but the performance they gave yesterday evening of "The First Year" was the best seen thus far.

It was not necessary either to have lived in Joplin, Mo., or Reading, Pa., to appreciate the clever home town sallies, since their application is universal. The young couple's struggles over the rocky road of the first year of married life were not only amusing, but at times they rang so true to life itself that the actors were forgotten. The applause was not in the least perfunctory but was the result of the audience's genuine appreciation.

Mr. Frawley and Miss Roberts in the roles of the overdoting parents were excellent. Miss Dorris Kemper as the daughter who is married to the budding real estate agent proved her ability as a delightful comedienne. Mr. Nedell as the hustling husband gave his best performance here. It is hoped that "The First Year" will be repeated, since it is the best "Chasse Cafards" that we know of.

Plans For Disbanding The Chinese Army Are Issued

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, November 17.—A communique issued by the Troops Disbandment Sub-Committee says:

The Washington Conference having on February 1 of this year adopted a resolution expressing to China the earnest hope that "immediate and effective steps" be taken to reduce her military forces, which are "excessive in number and controlled by the military chiefs of the provinces without co-ordination" a Special Washington Conference Commission was established and a Troop Disbandment Sub-Committee appointed under the Chairmanship of Mr. Wang Tah-hsieh, a former Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Between May 19 and July 26 seven meetings were held by the Sub-Committee, and as a result a comprehensive scheme has been recommended to the Chinese Government for consideration and action. The scheme provides in brief that the present system of recruiting be replaced by a system of standing army and reserves, that the minimum military strength be placed at twenty divisions (or ten divisions and twenty mixed brigades), that the task of disbandment be carried out in three periods, that $30,000,000 be found to disband the superfluous troops, and that a National Disbandment Commission be established. In addition, the scheme lays down various post-disbandment plans, including the provision of work for discharged officers.

SUMMARISES SCHEME

The recommendation of the Special Washington Conference Commission is prefaced by a preamble, which summarised the essential points of the scheme. The following are extracts of this recommendation:

The system of military organisation of the Chinese Republic shall consist of a standing army and reserves. Soldiers shall be selected by examination from those qualified to serve. The whole of China shall be divided into military areas for purposes of directing and supervising enlistment and disbandment of troops. The present administrative areas shall not be regarded as such military areas. Each unit shall be either a division or a mixed brigade, and in each area either one division or one mixed brigade shall be stationed.

The standing army shall consist of twenty divisions. All other military units shall be disbanded. The military strength prescribed in the preceding paragraph shall be passed by Parliament as a law. A National Disbandment Commission shall be established to discuss measures connected with and responsible for the carrying into effect of actual disbandment. Its constitution shall be drawn up separately. Taking as a basis that there are, according to the investigations of the Ministry of War, 1,500,000 soldiers in China at present, the process of disbandment shall be completed in three periods.

HALF MILLION AT TIME

In the first period 500,000 men shall be disbanded, the same in the second, while in the third out of the remaining 500,000 men, ten divisions and twenty mixed brigades of the standing army shall be organised. The balance shall gradually be retired from active service and organised into twenty divisions of reserves.

Several articles then deal with disbandment of inefficient troops and the cessation of recruiting prior to actual disbandment, also with the retention of troops in the interests of local peace. All disbanded troops are to be given "allowance" for those whose pay is in arrear and for those full paid up, amounting in the first case to between twenty and thirty dollars according to the amount owing, and $15 in cash for those paid up.

If entitled to receive more than $15 they will be paid partly in disbandment bonds. The expenses of disbandment shall be met by a disbanding loan, which shall be devised by the Ministry of Finance and approved by Parliament.

After disbandment plans are provided for the development of inter-communications, such as railways, national, provincial and district highways, etc., improvements of waterways, such as the Yellow River Conservancy, Yangtsze River and the Huai, encouragement of frontier settlement, in North-western Mongolia, Chinghai, etc., remeasurement of land, mapping and charting of boundaries, etc.

Research institutes for discharged officers shall be established in Peking and all military areas. All discharged and retired officers shall be able to enter the research institutes. Officers of the institutes shall be paid salaries in proportion to their rank and the merit at their research work.

Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, wife of the famous novelist and a newspaper woman and writer of note, spoke of the "New Woman of the World" at the meeting of the American Woman's Club yesterday.

Mrs. Seton described the new woman of Japan as she found her during a recent visit there—of how certain groups are more progressive than the most progressive American women—also of the rebellion of the educated women of Egypt against the customs of the ages.

While in Shanghai Mrs. Seton is learning all she possibly can of the progressive woman of China and will continue her study upon her return from a visit in Manila. Mrs. Seton is leaving the city on Thursday.

FIVE PRISONERS FROM SHANGHAI IN MANILA TODAY

U. S. Marshal Takes Men Convicted Here To Bilibid Prison

United States Marshal Thurston E. Porter, who sailed on the Empress of Canada with five prisoners from the American jail to be incarcerated in Bilibid prison, Manila, is due to arrive in Manila today. Marshal Porter will return to Shanghai on the President McKinley.

The five prisoners taken to Manila were all sentenced to prison terms by Judge Charles S. Lobingier in the United States Court and included L. S. Armstrong, who was sentenced to two years and three months for forging a check and passport in Nanking; John M. Nelson and E. J. Hickey, who were sentenced to one year each for forging a check and passing it on the Continental Hotel; Victor Antido, a Filipino, sentenced to three months and a half for carrying a dangerous weapon, and H. G. Theyken, former manager of the Canton office of Liggett and Myers, who was sentenced to 18 months for the embezzlement of cigarettes valued at $16,000.

KINGMAN & BROS

How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis, esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr KINGMAN to the subscribers consist in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly.
(2) Filling with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

November 21, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were each down 3-16d. in London yesterday. The New York price declined to 64½ cents and the London-New York cross rate improved to 449¾.

The only changes in our official quotations here today were a drop in the Franc rate to 955 and a rise in the Gold Dollar rate to 70¾.

At the opening our market was steady, quite a little business in Sterling being done at 3-2⅛ for November-December-January delivery and in Gold Dollars at 71½ November, 71⅝ December and 71¾ for forward.

Later on in the day speculators became strong sellers and in the afternoon as high as 3s. 2⅞d. for December-January Sterling was done. Gold Dollars were done at 72½ December, 72⅝ January and 72⅝ for forward delivery.

At one time there were good sellers at these rates but just before the close the market eased off somewhat closing with no sellers of Sterling at better than 3s. 2⅞d. for any delivery and of Gold Dollars at 72¼ November, 72¾ December and 72¼ forward delivery.

There were sellers of Yen at the close at 67¼ and buyers at 67⅛. Banks were quoting 3s. 3⅛d. for Sterling bills, 74 for Gold Dollar bills and 1010 for Franc bills.

China sold a small amount of silver in London yesterday and India bought. The market there as well as in New York is reported as steady.

Bumper Wheat Crop Fails To Aid Flour Mills; High Price Of Rice Cause

BY THE FINANCIAL EDITOR

Eight and a half million taels invested in the flour mills of Shanghai is producing no return. The industry is under the shadow of a great cloud. It experienced a very trying year last season, but it was confidently expected that this season would bring better conditions. Last season for a few months the flour mills of Shanghai were compelled to cease milling as the wheat crop was poor and imported wheat too high in price to induce the millowners to employ it on a large scale. This year, with a bumper wheat crop, the mills should have been able to work right through the season, but it has proved the worst year on record.

And this is remarkable for more than one reason. Within a short time of Chinese wheat coming on the market the supplies were snapped up, not to supply all the requirements of the flour mills of Shanghai but to satiate the hungry Chinese populace, who were driven by the high prices of rice to buy wheat as a substitute.

The supplies of Chinese wheat, instead of coming in large quantities dribbled in lots of five to seven thousand piculs a day, quite insufficient for the needs of the numerous mills.

People who did not know the conditions ascribed the short supply to a desire of the Chinese farmers to withhold their stocks and to send prices up, but as the season advanced and the supplies of the cereal, instead of increasing, began to diminish, it was soon apparent that both the millowners and the general public—outside of the farmers—were living in a fool's paradise.

It slowly dawned upon the millowners that supplies of wheat in the interior had been sold to the people as a substitute for rice, which had gone up very high in value, making it beyond the reach of the poor Chinese, who were constrained to buy wheat, as it was considerably cheaper than rice. So, where in the ordinary course, the flour mills would have had all the wheat they wanted, that commodity had been diverted to an unexpected channel. Arrival of wheat from the interior have now practically ceased and three of the four mills that made a heroic attempt to continue, have stopped working.

It is extremely unlikely that they will re-start operations until the next season. It is a pity that we have to resort to buying our flour from abroad. Very large purchases have already been made in the United States not only by Shanghai merchants but also by Hongkong and Tientsin.

The reason is apparent. Chinese flour found a ready market in the North as well as the South of China, and in the absence of sufficient supplies of wheat the mills were obliged to discontinue working, with the result that markets that had been to a large extent dependent upon Shanghai for their supply of flour have been obliged to fall back upon American and Australian flour, which are higher in price.

In other words, Taels 8,500,000 is producing no results for Shanghai investors, for that is the amount of capital invested in this industry in Shanghai. The stoppage of the flour mills has thrown out of employment some 4,000 workmen. Properly speaking, the flour mills began to work at the end of July and by the end of August half of them discontinued, so discouraged were they by the state of affairs and the quantity of wheat coming from the interior on the Shanghai market.

Were American prices of wheat not so high—and this is principally so because of the unfavorable exchange—the mills here would have been kept working. So long as prices were "right" the local mills imported very large quantities of wheat, but the drop in exchange has served to put a stop to the purchases. The future is still problematical for these institutions. Flour shipments to Shanghai from the Pacific Coast ports of the United States continue large, about 160,000 barrels having come from Tacoma and Seattle last month. The new business is not of large volume as Pacific flours are now too high. Shanghai, Hongkong and North China ports will take liberal amounts of flour if Pacific wheats decline to September's level.

Senator Newberry's Resignation

THE resignation of Truman H. Newberry, Republican Senator from Michigan, as a result of the recent election in which his colleague, Senator Charles E. Townsend, Republican, was defeated for re-election, will be welcomed by the entire electorate of the United States, irrespective of party affiliation.

Senator Newberry's election over his Democratic opponent, Henry Ford, in one of the most bitter elections ever fought in Michigan, resulted in charges that he had bought his election. The 'Newberryism' issue was bitterly fought out in the Senate and resulted in an exoneration of Newberry by a close vote, mostly on party lines, although several liberal Republicans were most caustic in their speeches against him.

In resigning Senator Newberry gives as his reason that the defeat of Senator Townsend, who voted in favor of Senator Newberry retaining his seat and supported him throughout the investigation would make futile his continuing in public service as he would be continually hampered by partisan and political persecution.

Senator Newberry is right, except that he did not go far enough. Any possible service Senator Newberry might have rendered the people of the United States or the people of Michigan ended when the investigation of his election disclosed that enormous sums had been spent in influencing voters. Such wanton disregard of the election laws gave Michigan as well as Newberry a 'black-eye.' As a possible servant of the people Newberry was rendered inutile.

Despite the fact that he was exonerated in the official investigation, many colleagues, prominent Republicans, and a large section of the American press demanded that Senator Newberry resign his seat and allow the appointment of a senator by the Governor of Michigan. Newberry again failed in his conception of American citizenship when he failed to heed such a demand.

Those Senators who voted in favor of Newberry retaining his seat faced the wrath of the voters in the last election and among them to go down to defeat was Senator Townsend, the colleague of Senator Newberry. The way is now clear for the Governor of Michigan to appoint a new Senator to succeed Senator Newberry and vindicate the political honor of the people of Michigan and the Republican party. The retirement of both Senators Newberry and Townsend should be welcomed as a much needed and long-delayed "house-cleaning" and will unquestionably meet with the hearty approval of every right-minded and right-thinking American.

Meanwhile, we assume, Henry Ford is making and marketing his 5,000 or 6,000 motor cars every day, and doing a great many other things for the development of his State and Country. He has the satisfaction of knowing he could have spent more money than Newberry's friends did, if that had been his idea of the way to win an honest election.

IF I WERE KING

King Alfonso, of Spain, has issued a decree forbidding people who have been eating garlic to approach him—News item.

If I were king I'd post decrees
At once in every handy place
To stop men when they wish to sneeze
From sneezing blithely in my face;
I'd order people who are stout,
When next to me they flop or flap,
To keep themselves from bulging out
And slopping over on my lap.

I'd have an edict quickly made
To cause the Fords to cease to try
To block the road on any grade
When I was going up on high.
The girl who gurgles night and day,
Endeavoring to learn to sing,
Would have to practise far away
From human haunts, if I were king.

The long-faced brothers who explain
How Sodom and Gomorrah fell,
And tell us nothing shall remain
To mark the places where we dwell—
If I were king I'd post decrees
Compelling them to hope and smile,
And cease to think all things that please
By being beautiful are vile.

The sap who says: "See what I mean?"
The simp who drives at break-neck speed,
The frump who thinks that she's a queen,
And those who loudly chew their feed;
These and the boobs who have the gall
To want me to be listening
To stale and vulgar tales would all
Be gagged for life, if I were king.

Three Church Reformers—By E. P. Graham-Barrow

(Note: This lecture was delivered by Mr. E. P. Graham Barrow to the Church of England Men's Society at Church House, Shanghai, on Monday, November 20, 1922.)

I think your time this evening will not be altogether wasted in examining the life work of such men as John Colet, Erasmus, and Sir Thomas More. It is true enough that from the point of view of those historians who care only for wars and politics; for the doings of kings, statesmen, and diplomatists—these Oxford reformers played a very unimportant part in the world, and are scarcely worthy of notice.

They never slew anybody; or gained advantages over their foes by judicious lying; or stole territory that did not belong to them.

But I feel certain that all here this evening find more genuine interest in the history of ideas and great movements, than in the history of wars and treaties and faction fights.

You would rather solve the problems of the Renaissance than know accurately all the intrigues and diplomatic schemings of the 18th Century.

Colet! —Erasmus! —More! —In the first place all three scholars were good men as well as great.

The study of those three great lives will bring you face to face with that great intellectual movement of Italy which has revolutionised human existence.—that Revival of Letters which may rightly be regarded as the most important change in the history of Europe which has occurred since the fall of the Roman Empire. We of Anglo-Saxon descent are naturally anxious to know how the Renaissance affected our own race, what influence it had upon the Reformation, in what ways it differed from the Renaissance in Italy. The answers to these questions can best be found in the lives and works of the Oxford Reformers, Colet, Erasmus, and More.

Great as was the enthusiasm of the Oxford scholars for the New Learning, they valued it chiefly as a means to a noble end. Colet learned Greek in order that he might cast away the fetters of the schoolmen and find in the original documents of Christianity a simpler and purer faith. Erasmus loved culture with boundless enthusiasm, but he used all his learning and scholarship to bring about the reform of the Church and nobler views of life. Sir Thomas More, like Machiavelli, wrote a treatise on government and politics, but his free thought produced not a libel on humanity and a picture of hopeless degradation, but a generous vision of future progress and an exalted scheme of ethics. In fact, the moral element in our English Revival was the predominant one. Colet inveighs against corruption and selfishness in high places. Erasmus lashes the laziness of monks and the tyranny of kings. More dares to dream of a time when poverty and misery shall have vanished from the earth, and obedience to the laws of Christ shall have brought about a veritable kingdom of God amongst men.

And these Oxford Reformers were no Protestants. Their chief importance in history is to be found in this, that they had given to the world an alternative scheme for a reform of the Church by quiet, gradual methods, without a revolution. They failed. Luther succeeded. He destroyed the abuses and corruptions of the Church, but the price paid was the sacrifice of the unity of Christendom, and from his day to our own the interminable warfare of the sects has retarded progress and brought shame upon Christianity.

We cannot help wondering sometimes, when we reflect upon the hostilities which the reformation has caused—the religious wars, the social strifes, the suicidal competition of sects, the narrowness and intense individualism to which Protestantism is prone, the multiplication of factions and discords, perpetuated alike in life and in death between brother-men, between friends and kinsmen—whether Goethe was right when he declared that it would have been well for the world had Erasmus and not Luther guided the Reforming movement.

I would like to take each of these men and give their histories, but time demands that I should deal only with their accomplishments. Colet was the first born of a family of 21. He went to one of the best schools of the day—St. Anthony's—and I cannot but imagine it was better than that described by Erasmus, who writes:

"At the present time all public instruction has passed into the hands of schoolmasters. And though there ought to have been the greatest care in appointing them, those assigned to the post are, as a rule, a shabby broken-down set of men, sometimes hardly in their senses. So mean the place, so mere the pittance, you would say the pigs were being reared there, and not that respectable people's children were being taught."

Well, to get down to the real subject. We want to know how these men brought to England the great gems of a New Learning that had its birth in Italy.

A stray scholar or so went and returned—and did his little bit—but it was a Thomas Linacre—the celebrated founder of the College of Physicians—and a William Grocyn—who brought back the treasures of a Renaissance, and showed them to two of the most famous scholars of the next generation—Erasmus and Thomas More.

The third channel of communication between Italy and England was Colet himself. He left Oxford in 1494 and spent the next two years in Italy "like a merchant," "seeking goodly pearls."

When he returned to Oxford in 1496, fresh from contact with Italian learning, he began at once to lecture, not upon the works of any classical author but upon St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. His lectures mark an era in the history of religious thought in England. Colet was an unauthorised teacher and had taken no degree in Divinity, but his fresh and original treatment of the Scriptures drew all Oxford, abbots and heads of houses included, to his lecture rooms. He was fiercely in earnest and disdained to receive fees from his hearers. "The race for professorships and fees," he told Erasmus, "spoilt everything and adulterated the purity of all branches of learning."

And listen to his advice to his pupils.

"Keep firmly to the Bible and the Apostles' Creed," "let divines if they like, dispute about the rest."

And in a materialistic age I pass on the precept as worthy to be practised.

Colet's greatness as a theologian is not to be estimated by his own writings, but by the influence which he exercised over his friends. He taught Erasmus what Erasmus afterwards taught the world. He helped to make more what he was—the boldest thinker and the most perfect man of his generation.

He railed against pluralities—against the setting of low minded men in high placed offices.

"Some like the illiterate Bishop, whom Sir Thomas More satirised in a stinging epigram—one of the ignorant opponents of the Revival of Letters—who defended the allegorical interpretations of the Schoolmen by the usual text "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life," and drew down upon himself More's laughing retort that he was "too illiterate for any letters to have killed him, and if they had he had no spirit to bring him to life again."

He thunders against the worldliness and pride, the covetousness and luxury and secular occupations of the prelates of his day.

"They give themselves up to feasting and banqueting," he says: "spend themselves in vain babbling, take part in sports and plays, devote themselves to hunting and hawking; are drowned in the delights of this world." Worst of all the corruptions of the time, however, Colet rank: the race for wealth which had infected his order. "What else in these days," he asks the astonished Convocation, "do we seek for in the Church than rich benefices and promotions? In these same promotions what else do we count upon but their fruits and revenues? We rush after them with such eagerness that we care not how many and what duties or how great benefices we take, if only they have great revenues. O Covetousness! Paul rightly called thee the root of all evil. From thee comes this piling-up of benefices one on the top of the other; from thee quarrels about tithes, about offerings, about mortuaries, about ecclesiastical right and title, for which we fight as for our very lives. Why should I mention the rest? Every corruption, all the ruin of the Church, all the scandals of the world, come from the covetousness of priests."

Colet might as well have preached to the winds. The only result of his sermons seems to have been that henceforth the Dean of St. Paul's was a marked man.

A half a dozen lectures might easily be given upon Erasmus without exhausting the interest that his life and work affords. We can only concern ourselves with a single product of the brain of the greatest scholar in Europe. He belonged to Europe. Colet and More are mainly interesting to Englishmen—Erasmus was cosmopolitan. Holland gave him birth; France gave him education; England was generous to him when poor and unknown; Italy opened out to him the treasures of antiquity and enabled him to lead the Renaissance movement North of the Alps. Germany courted him. Switzerland, when the Lutheran struggle grew hot and furious, afforded him a secure retreat during his later years.

His book "The Praise of Folly" is one of the most powerful satires of a century which produced the "Epistles of Obscure Men" and More's "Utopia." "The Praise of Folly" is a serious indictment of the abuses of the time. Its exposure of the monks and the corruption of the Church did much to prepare the way for the Reformation.

The idea of the little book is this. The goddess Folly ascends a rostrum, arrayed in cap and bells, and pronounces upon herself that eulogy which an ungrateful world has forgotten to accord to her. She claims to be the chief of all goddesses, man's best benefactress, the cause of all his happiness, the river of all his pleasures. "Who knows not," she argues, "that man's childhood is by far the best period of his existence? And why? Because he is then most a fool. And next to that his youth, in which folly still prevails; while in proportion as he retires from her dominion and becomes possessed, through discipline and experience, of mature wisdom, his beauty loses its bloom, his strength declines, his wit becomes less pungent. At last weary old age succeeds with a weariness which would be absolutely unbearable, did not Folly, in pity of such grievous miseries, give relief by bringing on a second childhood." It is true, she admits, that Reason also has a share in influencing the lives of men, but then how small a share! Jupiter intended them to be merry, and took care that reason should exist in due subordination. Moreover as an antidote to the dangerous effects of wisdom, Folly herself had advised the creation of woman—"a foolish, silly creature no doubt," she says, "but amusing and agreeable, who owes to me alone those endowments in which she excels and surpasses man." Next, we are to mark how dependent we are upon Folly for the joys of life. She it is who makes friendship possible by hiding each other's faults. Cupid, too, is a blind little fool. Woe to society were it otherwise! Self-esteem is only another form of foolishness, but without it the world could scarce go on. "Take away this one property of a fool," she argues wittily, "and the orator shall become as dumb and silent as the pulpit he stands in; the musician shall hang up his untouched instrument on the wall; the painter shall himself banish into an imaginary landscape." On the other hand what happiness does self-esteem bring, which so flushes men with a good conceit of their own that no one repents of his shape, his wit, of his education, or of his country! so that the dirty half-drowned Hollander would not remove into the pleasant plains of Italy, nor the brutish Scythian quit his thorny deserts to become an inhabitant of the Fortunate Island.

It is a mistake, Folly continues, to pay so much regard to wise men. Geniuses manage their domestic concerns very badly. Grave scholars are like deaths'-heads at a feast, like camels at a dance, dull and useless in common life. They are no good either for war or politics. In battle your Demosthenes runs away. The best soldiers are outrageous louts and shallow-brained plough-boys. As for government and Plato's philosopher-kings, bookish and learned governors are the worst in the world. A pretty business the Catos and Gracchi and Brutuses made of it! Even Antoninus did not do his people so much good by his wisdom as he did harm by leaving a Commodus to succeed him. Nature, luckily, takes care that this curse of wisdom shall not become hereditary. The children of Socrates were dull insipid souls, or, as someone ingeniously expresses it—"they had more of the mother than of the father."

Worst of all, wise men are wretched. It is the fools who are happy. Wisdom opens our

Three Church Reformers

cycs to the miserable spectacle of the countless ills flesh is heir to: infirmity, disease, and death; besides all that man inflicts upon his fellow—a prospect that has to many sages made suicide sweet and welcome. The truly happy are the votaries of Folly, on whom shame, disgrace, abuse, fall pointless. Her blessed illusions are what BLIND men to life and give them joy.

After more of this admirable fooling the goddess suddenly forgets herself and becomes serious. She can joke no longer when she has to speak of schoolmen and theologians, kings and popes and monks, as they were at the end of the fifteenth century. It is John Colet who speaks now. Erasmus has at least redeemed his promise to aid him in his crusade both against an obsolete theology and a corrupt and degraded church. Folly claims the scholastic divines as her peculiar disciples. "It is by one of my properties, self-love," she says, "that they fancy themselves caught up to the third heaven, from whence they look down with contempt upon the whole human race as if they were cattle creeping on the ground." She lashes the commentators, who made darker what was dark before; the theologians who explain exactly how the worlds were created and the foundations of the earth were laid—"at whose conjectures," she observes drily, "Nature is mightily amused;" the divines "who minutely describe everything in the infernal regions as if they had passed many years in that kingdom; and concludes her attack on the schoolmen by modestly proposing to send the whole tribe of confident controversialists to do battle against the Turks. Nothing, she is sure, could stand against their invincible prowess.

The monks fare even worse than the theologians, and Erasmus, the Catholic, range against them far more bitterly than any Protestant Foxe or Tyndale. "These very delightful men," he writes, "who are remarkable for their dirt, their ignorance, their clownish manners, who bellow for bread in front of our doors, who bray out in church the psalms which they count indeed but cannot understand, they pretend forsooth that they are the genuine successors of the Apostles! Their religion consists in having their dress of the prescribed shape, material, pieces, their girdle in so many knots, their sleep in so many divisions. They strive not so much to be like Christ as to be unlike one another. If they only knew what will befall them on the last day, when the Judge shall demand to see their works of charity? What will they have to show? Bushels of psalms sung, tons of fish eaten; one will bring his single hood never changed, another the gloves without which he never handled money for sixty years, others will point to numbness or paralysis brought on by the confinement of the cell. But the Judge will interrupt them. 'Whence comes this new race of Jews.' My mansions are promised to deeds of faith and charity. I will have righteousness and not traditions.'"

This then was the first fruit of the Renaissance working upon the Teutonic mind—simply a moral revolt against the corrupt Christianity of the time.

The Changing East

Shanghai, The Manchester Of China

In his series on the Far East in the Saturday Evening Post, a weekly magazine with a circulation of over 2,000,000 in the United States, Mr. Marcosson calls Shanghai and the surrounding district the Manchester of China. In this installment of his extremely interesting article Mr. Marcosson tells the story of two of Shanghai's most prominent Chinese citizens, Mr. C. C. Nieh and Mr. H. Y. Moh.

BY ISAAC F. MARCOSSON

A picturesque detail of the Chinese cotton-spinning industry is that there are still hundreds of thousands of hand looms operated by women and children in the homes.

Here you have an activity that parallels the famous toy production in the German Black Forest country, where every member of the household contributes to the industrial output. The Chinese, like the Germans, are thrifty and industrious. This application, as it might be called, is one of the bulwarks of industry.

Far more diverting than these statistical details is the human element in Chinese cotton spinning. Shanghai is the Manchester of the republic, and here you find the cotton magnates who can hold their own with the big business men of any other country. Conspicuous among them is C. C. Nieh, who is one of the most interesting personalities that I met in China. As mill organiser, educationalist and philanthropist he is an outstanding figure. Years ago he read some of Count Tolstoy's books in English and was so much impressed that he translated them into Chinese. From that time the great Russian thinker was his guide and preceptor. Nieh's extensive adventures in altruism have been entirely due to the Russian's influence. Thus, in Nieh you find that curious and somewhat unexpected Oriental phenomenon expressed in the combination of hard business sense and practical idealism.

Nieh's father was governor successively of the provinces of Kiangsu and Chekiang. This means that he was a rich man's son and destined for the more or less useless life of the conventional Chinese official. At an early age, however, he determined to do something constructive for his country and not only studied English with tutors but took private courses in electrical and chemical engineering. When he was twenty-five some shares in the Heng Foong Cotton Mill at Yangtzepoo, near Shanghai, came into his hands. It was one of the pioneer mills of China, had less than 15,000 spindles, and was being run at a considerable loss. Without experience or technical knowledge he determined to reorganise the institution.

Through his father's influence he borrowed 80,000 Shanghai taels—a Shanghai tael is worth about seventy cents gold—and was so successful in his administration that the first twelve months of operation under his management yielded a profit of 120,000 taels. Nieh still owns this mill, which now has 40,000 spindles and employs 1,600 people. This is the type of man who, with the possible exception of H. Y. Moh, is the foremost factor in China's cotton spinning, for he helped to organise the Chinese Cotton Mill Owners' Association and was responsible for the Cotton Improvement Committee, of which he is chairman.

Nieh is tall, lithe and spectacled. With him I went out to see his latest venture, which is the Great China Cotton Mill, located on the Whangpoo River, a small tributary of the Yangtsze, about twenty-five miles from Shanghai. Woosung, not far away, was the rendezvous for Chinese pirates in the old days when river brigandage flourished in those parts.

Here Nieh has constructed what is in many respects the model cotton mill of China, for the series of immense concrete structures, with power plant and subsidiary buildings, cover an area of twenty-five acres. The entire establishment represents the last word in equipment and welfare facilities. Hygiene as well as output is among the first Nieh considerations. The Great China Cotton Mill represents a real advance in Chinese industry. It employs 2,800 people and I have not seen a more contented lot anywhere. All together, Nieh is interested in half a dozen big mills, and in each one his ideas of factory efficiency, based on the American model, rule.

Nearby is the China Machine Works, which was also established by Nieh, where he manufactures spindles, looms and machine parts. In this adjunct he is taking a step towards self-sufficiency. Though Nieh realises that China owes a great debt to foreign industrial influence and still needs foreign aids, he is a disciple of that self-help which in the end must spell the social and commercial salvation of the country.

THE RISE OF MR. NIEH

Nieh's career—he is only forty-two—is an epitome of what the progressive Chinese can do the moment he gears his keen intelligence and application to modern things. I was amazed at his knowledge of American and European industries. He is perhaps the leading advocate of vocational education in China and has endowed various schools of this kind. On the way out to the Great China Mill we stopped at a social settlement which is called Hull House, in honor of the institution founded by Jane Addams at Chicago. It is supported by several individual cotton-mill owners of the new type, who pay twenty-five cents a year for the education of each child taught there. With this paltry sum a Chinese child is not only taught to read and write but also gets manual instruction. Nowhere else in the world can a small amount accomplish so much as in China.

I can give no better evidence of the caliber of C. C. Nieh than to say that on the morning that he took me out to the Great China Mill he was a few minutes late in keeping the appointment. In apologising for what he regarded as a discourtesy he explained that the reason for his tardiness was that he had just delivered an address before the National Christian Conference then in session at Shanghai, on the relationship between business and morals; a highly necessary coordination, I might add, for China. Nieh is not only a Christian but practices the gospel that he preaches. He is the exact opposite of what is known in China as the rice-Christian, who is so often charged with capitalising conversion for utilitarian purposes only.

Of equal rank in the Chinese cotton Who's Who is H. Y. Moh, who is one of the richest men in the republic. In him you have the increasingly familiar type of the Chinese self-made man. Twenty-two years ago he did not know a word of English and was an obscure clerk in the store of a cotton merchant at Shanghai, who had brought him up, for his parents were poor. Today he is managing director of three cotton mills representing 150,000 spindles and 600 looms and with a paid-up capital of 6,000,000 Shanghai taels.

Like Nieh, Moh was ambitious from boyhood. After serving as clerk in the Shanghai Maritime Customs he became an English instructor in a normal school, having first taught himself the language. Later he became connected with the Kiangsu Railway and rose to be chief of its police department.

MOH'S CONSTRUCTIVE WORK

In 1909, when he was thirty-two years of age, he had saved enough money to give himself the technical education that he had so long desired. He first entered the University of Wisconsin. Subsequently he studied at the University of Illinois, where he completed a course in agriculture and took his degree as Bachelor of Science. He also took a special course in soap making at the Armor Institute in Chicago and studied cotton planting and manufacturing at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas. When you consider that by this time he was well advanced in the thirties, it is plainly to be seen that the Chinese of his type take no half steps in preparation for a life work.

Upon his return to China, Moh established his first cotton mill. At that time it was in 1914—the general belief among the Chinese was that they could never successfully compete with Japan in cotton textiles. The Twenty-One Demands had been enforced and it looked as if Nippon had fastened a strangle hold upon big Chinese industrial production. Moh, however, proved, as did Nieh, that China could more than hold her own.

Since 1915, Moh's business life has been one continuous expansion. The important detail, however, lies in his efforts for standardisation. He was the first manufacturer to spin fine yarns and he was also the pioneer in the manufacture of shirtings and jeans. In 1914 he established the cotton experiment station which is named after him, where American seeds are distributed gratis among farmers. To encourage Chinese agriculturists to use American seed he set up at his own expense in Shanghai a cotton ginnery with American gins. Not only is he the author of a widely distributed book called Simple Remarks on Cotton Improvement, but he has also translated F. W. Taylor's well-known Principles of Scientific Management into Chinese. Incidentally, Moh organised the Chinese Industrial Bank and the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange, of which he is president. It is doubtful if any American magnate can surpass this record of constructive advancement both of self and of industry.

If you met H. Y. Moh in a crowd of Chinese you would never single him out as the individual who has achieved so much in such a brief time, for he is only forty-five. He is undersized, wears Chinese attire, his face is keen and his eyes alert.

The Changing East

I asked him to analyse the Chinese industrial situation for me and he said:

"We have just begun our development. China is so vast that the slight work done so far by a few of her enlightened merchants and industrial workers in the different commercial centers is insignificant when you apply American standards. Even cotton manufacturing and flour making, the two best-developed branches, have not become half of what they should be.

"The first factor which has retarded our industrial development is the lack of adequate communications. We have only 2½ percent of the mileage of the United States. With railways and good roads, combined with navigation lines connecting China with America and Europe, we can supply raw materials and foodstuffs to the whole world. Mankind need not worry about coal for at least another thousand years if China can open and transport her enormous coal reserves by modern methods.

"We also need uniform currency and an adequate banking system. Our banks need to be reorganised because interest rates, especially in the North, frequently go up to from 10 to 20 percent a year. This is a great inconvenience to business. What China needs badly is a standardised currency. We have too many different kinds of money and it creates confusion.

"The frequency of political disturbances has also retarded the industrial advance. Many valuable properties are without protection from bandits, and farsighted business men shrink from pushing industry in the interior at their own risk. If China can eliminate militarism industry will at once be speeded up.

"Then, too, there is the scarcity of technical knowledge and practical experience. With technical knowledge the Chinese can easily succeed in any industry, because there is such little competition and usually 100 percent possibility for a modern business enterprise to prove successful.

"The Chinese are gratified over the assistance given us by America at the Washington Conference. The Shantung question was settled and this settlement involved all China. It means that the economic pressure following the Japanese encroachment on our territory is removed. If the money for the redemption of the Shantung Railway is raised by the people in due time, and the railway and other valuable properties are restored to us, China has a good chance for self-reformation."

I could continue this roster of cotton magnates over a considerable space. Nieh and Moh, however, are sufficient to show the quality of the progressives who are not only building up Chinese industry but Chinese morals as well. When you contemplate the romance of their achievements on have the feeling that the era of productive advancement for the whole country is really launched.

CHINA'S BACKWARDNESS

In passing, it may be worth while to point out a little-known reason for China's industrial backwardness. I am reminded of it because Moh referred to the lack of techical knowledge among his countrymen. The average Chinese still thinks and speaks in the language of the great sages of the past. These philosophers naturally knew nothing of modern scientific appliances. Therefore they have handed down no words of wisdom about railways or machinery. In many parts of China people still oppose railroads because they think the noise of the locomotives disturbs the spirits of their ancestors. It follows that the Chinese language has no Western technical phrases. The native engineer or industrial manager must, therefore, resort to English to give instructions to his subordinates who do not speak English.
